

Announcing First Decennial Conference

RE-IMAGINING SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCHES: Global Context, National Perspectives and Regional Priorities

Dates: 18th to 20th November 2016

Venue: Sanskriti – NEICR, Guwahati, INDIA.

Concept

The first decennial and innovative research based conference, hosted by the Sanskriti-North Eastern Institute of Cultural Research, Guwahati, India in collaboration with Institute of Indian Culture, Mumbai, Sanskriti, Institute of Dravidian Culture & Research, Hyderabad, Sanskriti Kendra, Sundargarh and other Social Science Research Institutes of India is expected to be attended by over 70 delegates, many of whom are well known sociologists, anthropologists and Professors/authors who are making a commendable contribution to the social science research output today.

It was also a long standing concern of Sanskriti group of institutes that in our country we need to become a beacon of hope in rejuvenating social science research with special reference to anthropological research. Of course, several measures are taken by various agencies both coming under the government initiatives and under the NGO sector, however, much more remains to be achieved for the benefit of the academic world in the contemporary research scenario. Our endeavour is also to bring together some of the time tested minds to interact with and attract young scholars who have a passion for social science research amidst real time and meet with emerging challenges with special reference to anthropological research.

This long awaited international event will be also the 10th annual undertaking based on intensive thinking, and designed by eminent professors and other committed scholars some of whom are directors of Sanskriti group of Institutions managed by SVD Society in India including Foundation Fellows, Fellows, Life Time Members and other long standing academic friends of Sanskriti research institute, Guwahati, Assam, India. The august gathering of this international event also will witness a number of very important ceremonies including conferring of a variety of prestigious awards both for the emeritus fellows and young and emerging social scientists of our country who are passionately pursuing research, performing arts and so on. It is expected that a few leading academicians from abroad is to take part in this large academic gathering and present their valuable findings in the area of social science research, with special reference to anthropological research in India and north east India.

Nestled along the mighty Brahmaputra river, you will be glad to know that Sanskriti is a well located emerging research institute, attuned to the pulse of the people of this vast expanse of north east India, and is well connected to road, rail and air communication.

This event is expected to attract people of diverse social science academic disciplines and is hoped to contribute towards the original and contemporary thinking in social science researches. These academic debates will also eventually prove useful and interesting to the community of people, who share the common objective of making a positive impact on society through; better education, healthcare, communications, technology, social welfare, economic rejuvenation, protection of the environment and so on. So this gathering of scholars is a wonderful place to meet, discuss and deliberate for the benefit of friendship and academic rejuvenation.
